

Housewives' Guide to Market Prices

After Easter prices show little change from those of last week, while the variety of vegetables, fruits and fish offered the housewife has increased owing to the favorable weather conditions.

In the fish markets fresh mackerel from near by, Spanish mackerel from Chesapeake Bay, soft shell crabs, small but very well flavored, clams from Long Island and down east, and butter fish, a small white meat "pan" or frying fish, are added to the assortment of fish on sale. The mackerel was wholesaling last week at 75 cents per pound, but with liberal supplies the price dropped this week and the retail price is but 40 cents per pound. Spanish mackerel is selling at 40 cents, soft shell crabs at 35 per dozen, the first of the season, clams on the half shell, 30 cents per dozen, and large or chowder clams 35 to 45 cents, according to size. Butter fish cost 25 cents per pound.

Only two weeks remain of the oyster season; small size sell at 24 cents per dozen, and frying size, 30 to 35 cents. Clams take the place of oysters during the summer season, and as the season advances they become better in flavor and larger in size. Scallops are running out and smelts are about gone. Roe shad from Delaware is offered at 45 cents this week, male shad at 30 cents. This Southern variety is cheaper than the nearby but generally is not in as fine condition as the nearby shad. Halibut sells for 40 cents per pound; salmon from the West, 55 cents; striped bass, which is scarce, 40 cents; codfish, very fine now, 25 cents; sounders, 15 cents; shrimps are high on account of the storms, selling at 35 cents, and lobsters are up to 60 cents for same reason.

Green vegetables are plentiful and for 10 cents the housewife may select from a number of vegetables what she wishes for her dinner. Carrots are on sale at 5 cents per bushel; 2 bunches will be sufficient for a small family; large egg plant sells for 10 cents; small head of new cabbage suitable for salad or cooking; 2 pounds of old potatoes; bunch of celery hearts; one summer squash; large bunch of radishes; 2 heads of 5 cent lettuce; 2 cucumbers which sell at 5 cents a piece; 2 pounds of turnips. Green beans are offered 2 pounds for 25 cents; beets, 2 large bunches, 2 pounds of spinach, or dandelion greens, for the same price.

Wholesale new Southern carrots cost the retailer $1.25 to $2 per hamper; eggplant, 75 cents to $2.50 per box; new cabbage, 75 cents to $1.50 per basket; celery hearts, $1.25 to $1.75 per dozen; summer squash from Florida, $2 to $3 per basket; radishes from Virginia, per half barrel basket, 25 cents to $1; lettuce, 50 cents to $3 per basket, according to grade and condition; cucumbers, $1 to $3.25 per basket; green beans, $1 to $3.25 per basket; beets, 75 cents to $2.25 per hamper; spinach, 50 cents per basket for Jersey grown.

Strawberries are arriving in liberal supply, with the quality uneven, many of the berries showing mildew or decay. By careful selection the housewife can get fair quality on sale, for retailers are displaying pint boxes at 20 and 25 cents each and quart boxes at 35 and 40 cents. The early coconuts are on the market at 15 cents each, with Avocado pears from South America selling from 75 cents and up each. Rhubarb is low at 10 cents a bunch. Oranges and bananas can be had three for 10 cents, although the better fruit costs from 40 cents a dozen up. Grapefruit are in good supply, but the quality is not the best. The price ranges from 15 to 18 cents each.

Eggs have returned to 29 cents a dozen for browns and guaranteed whites are 39 cents, with the wholesale demand reported steady. The housewife is said to be using plenty of eggs but not in the quantities noticeable when the prices first declined. A nice Friday supper dish is scrambled eggs with mushrooms, or anchovies for those who prefer them. Prepare six fresh mushrooms, cut them in small dice and fry a few minutes in butter. Toast several slices of white bread; butter them. Beat four eggs, season with salt and pepper, add two tablespoons of water, mixing well, and pour into buttered skillet containing mushrooms. When eggs are set nicely put on toast and dust with paprika. If anchovies are preferred open a 15-cent jar, prepare fish by trimming and breaking into small pieces. Fry in butter and add eggs to them; when cooked pour over toast. Either dish is to be served with green peas.
